Medication update 2020: The year in review and the road ahead

David E. Koren, PharmD, BCPS, AAHIVP
Clinical Pharmacist Specialist – HIV/ID
Temple Health

David E. Koren, PharmD, BCPS, AAHIVP is an infectious disease clinical pharmacist at Temple University Hospital in Philadelphia, an adjunct assistant clinical professor for the School of Pharmacy and the Lewis Katz School of Medicine at Temple University, and a faculty lecturer for the MidAtlantic AIDS Education and Training Center. Dr. Koren received his Doctor of Pharmacy from the Temple University School of Pharmacy and completed accredited post-graduate Pharmacy Practice and Infectious Diseases residencies at Yale-New Haven Hospital and Cleveland Clinic. Dr. Koren is a board-certified pharmacotherapy specialist and a credentialed HIV Pharmacist from the American Academy of HIV Medicine. His clinical interests include innovative models for pharmacist delivery of care as well as the prevention, treatment, and management of HIV and Hepatitis C. Dr. Koren has presented viral infection-related research abstracts at the regional, national, and international level and has published several manuscripts in peer-reviewed journals. He serves on the national pharmacists’ committee for the American Academy of HIV Medicine and was designated the 2019 early career award recipient from the American Public Health Association – Pharmacy Section.