Dear ANAC Family, Friends and Colleagues,

The ANAC 2022 conference committee enthusiastically welcomes you to Tampa Bay and to ANAC's 35th annual conference!

The past year has been quite challenging for many of us in Florida and across the globe both personally, politically and professionally. We have witnessed the devastating effects from multiple syndemics and the continued impacts from the Covid-19 variants. We are truly in an unprecedented time and that is what makes this year's gathering so important.

The political climate and health inequities in Florida and around the world helped to shape the conference content this year and why this year's conference theme is "Equity, Compassion & Science - The Keys to Ending the Epidemic. These next few days will provide an opportunity to reconnect, learn and discuss a myriad of topics related to HIV and infectious diseases, domestically and globally. This is also an opportunity to reflect on how we, as nurses, have a role in ending the HIV epidemic as well as breaking down the barriers that keep many of our underserved populations out of the equitable care they deserve.

We will be introducing our newly revised policy agenda that encompasses many of the responses from our membership survey. We want to say thank you to all of you who shared your thoughts and did so with integrity, transparency and compassion. Sessions at conference will reflect the four pillars of the agenda: access, human rights, evidence-based services and approaches and nursing workforce issues.

Since the conference is in Florida, a state where many of these discriminatory practices are getting a lot of attention, the conference will be bringing in regional as well as national speakers that can address these issues and share best practices and experiences that you can take back home with you utilize and put into play.

One of our pre-conference sessions will be focused on state-based advocacy for nurses and healthcare workers. There will be local representation from Planned Parenthood, Equality Florida, The AIDS Institute, AHF, Florida Nurses Association. They will share their expertise and toolkits, so you feel ready to advocate for the issues needed in your areas. I have many colleagues say to me that they want to do more advocacy, but they just don't know where to begin. The preconference will address that need.

The conference committee has also been hard at work to create a fun and lively "Gay"la on Thursday night with a Tampa Bay flair. While in Tampa, we hope you can take advantage of visiting some of the local historic venues, you never know, you might stumble upon a pirate or 2 while out and about in Ybor City, Arrrr!

Many thanks go out to my colleagues on the conference committee, and I am grateful for your contributions. A special thank you to Erin Myers and Carole Treston and the rest of the staff at the national ANAC office. Without your leadership, none of this would be possible! Thank you to the 2022 ANAC Board of Directors who have been continually engaged and supportive of the committee.

Finally, we are grateful to you, our participants. Enjoy ANAC 2022. Have fun and stay safe!!

Sincerely,

Donna Sabatino, Conference Chair

SUPPORTING SPONSORS:

Dear conference attendees:

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the 2022 ANAC annual conference and gathering together in Tampa. It's amazing how uplifting and energizing in-person meetings are compared to Zoom meetings, they sometimes zap my energy and leave me a bit depleted. I am looking forward to sharing experiences, learning, understanding other perspectives and hearing from you - in person! I invite you to share with me what is on your mind, what we are doing right and what we can do better (and sharing some jokes or personal updates too—the things we don't do on Zoom!).

I hope you are able to attend the pre-conference skills building workshops: using social media for promoting academic publications, presented by JANAC and a concurrent workshop to build skills in state based and local advocacy. Both are so important in the current climate.

This year's theme: Equity, Compassion and Science: Keys to Ending the Epidemic is reflected throughout the conference content. Our six plenaries and twelve invited speaker concurrent sessions feature an awesome line-up of speakers and topics, mainly centered on the roles of nurse leadership at intersections of health and social justice, equitable health policy and implementing innovative person-centered HIV prevention and treatment with, and for, the communities we serve. This year we are trying something new, featuring an additional plenary slot to show the documentary The Legend of the Underground, a moving feature documentary that explores the discrimination faced by gender non-conforming and gay youth in Nigeria. Our powerful closing plenary features Daniel Dawes, a nationally recognized health policy leader and author who will discuss strategies to build health EQUITY for the communities we serve.

The other plenaries are powerful too, each one with an inspirational speaker examining intersectional issues around HIV and the important roles of nurses therein. COMPASSION, a cornerstone to HIV care is featured in sessions that examine mental health and patient support services. Underpinning the entire conference is SCIENCE as speakers, abstract sessions and posters provide evidenced-based updates on HIV and related prevention and treatment and cutting-edge research.

We close the conference with the awards dinner, included in the registration fee this year. All are welcome. I hope that you will attend the awards dinner on Saturday evening and celebrate with your colleagues.

Please remember to complete the evaluation and claim your credit hours for the conference. Up to 18 hours of continuing nursing professional development (CNE) are available. View the posters in the exhibit hall. They are included!

I want to thank our sponsors and supporters that make the conference possible, the conference committee for guidance and a BIG shout out to the ANAC staff who have worked so hard on pulling this together. And to you, the attendees, thank you for coming and I hope it's a great three days for you!

Framing, Messaging and Optimizing Dissemination of Nursing Research through Traditional and Social Media

Grand Ballroom H

Nursing research plays a pivotal role in helping the lay and scientific community understand the experiences of patients' with chronic diseases, health disparities or social inequities. Yet, few nurse scientists have the requisite skills necessary to engage with new and traditional media as vehicles to disseminate their research findings. The goal of this training is to provide participants with skills in framing and messaging their work for a target audience and to increase the public visibility of nurses as health experts.

Orlando Harris, PhD, RN, MPH, FNP, Assistant Professor, School of Nursing University of California, San Francisco

Advocacy and Policy Workshop

Wednesday 1 - 4 p.m.

Make Your Voice Heard: Advocacy skills-building on state and local policy issues

Grand Ballroom G

Headlines from federal politics are dominating the news and it can be easy to overlook the importance of advocacy efforts at the state or local level. Nursing practice, reproductive rights, voter rights, gender identity issues and other restrictions on human rights are increasingly being determined at the state level. Do you have an important issue that impacts you or your community, but don't know where to start? Join local and national advocacy leaders in an interactive skills-building session that will prepare you to leverage your voice as nurses in advocacy to be a force for good.

Community Welcome Reception

Implementation of the Florida's IDEA Syringe Services Programs: Translating Research Evidence into Policy Action

Grand Ballroom H

This presentation will discuss the 10-year journey to bring syringe services programs (SSPs) to Florida, present the findings from the IDEA Miami pilot program and provide current updates on statewide implementation efforts. SSPs are community-based programs that provide access to sterile injection equipment and facilitate safe disposal of used syringes. SSPs have 40+ years of scientific evidence supporting their role in HIV and HCV prevention among people who inject drugs, a marginalized community that accounts for 10% of new HIV infections nationwide.

HIV Is Not A Crime: Demanding Better for Impacted Communities

Grand Ballroom G

The HIV epidemic is centered around issues of race, gender, sexual orientation and poverty, which impacts marginalized communities already vulnerable to acquiring HIV with discriminatory enforcement. Social drivers such as poverty, racism, mass incarceration, violence, homophobia, transphobia, inadequate access to health care, unemployment and low educational attainment coalesce into HIV criminalization. This session will discuss how criminalization intersects with these social drivers, and how advocacy to change the laws must be inclusive of legislative, medical and community stakeholders, as well as people living with HIV.

Treating Stimulant Use Disorder in HIV Settings

Grand Ballroom I

The use of stimulants, methamphetamine, crack and powder cocaine are drivers of HIV transmission in the United States. For people who inject stimulants, HIV transmission risks are most acute. Yet most people who use stimulants (and who increasingly use stimulants in combination with fentanyl) do so via non-injection routes and can engage in extreme types of sexual behaviors ("chem-sex") that can facilitate HIV and other infectious disease transmission. This session will discuss the limited set of treatments that have strong research evidence that supports their use – especially in HIV care and prevention settings. These medications can be a solid foundation for integrating evidence based behavioral therapies and social support approaches to help patients meet their stimulant use treatment goals.

PrEP and Multipurpose Prevention Technology Pipeline

Florida Ballroom

While the last year has seen the exciting addition of two new HIV pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) drugs, unmet medical needs remain for many people at risk of HIV infection. Numerous innovative PrEP products are in development to meet these needs in a variety of ways, including novel drugs and novel ways of dosing proven PrEP drugs. In addition, there is great interest in simplifying prevention regimens by combining PrEP with contraceptives or prevention of traditional STIs into a single multi-purpose prevention technology (MPT) or product. We will survey this rich pipeline of novel prevention strategies intended to meet the needs of a broader population at risk of HIV, STIs or unwanted pregnancy.

Article of the Year

“Everyone of us is a strand in that basket: Weaving together stories of Indigenous wellness and resilience from the perspective of those with lived and living experience with HIV/Hep C Virus”

This article highlights the ways settler-colonialism within Canada has produced a system of health care that has neglected the Indigenous experience. The emerging themes of connection, disconnection and reconnection offer teachings for Indigenous journeys of resilience and wellness for those living with HIV/hepatitis C virus. Offering participants voices in word images was an important methodological choice that was essential for creating emotional connection with the findings. We hope this article may provide insights for health care practitioners to envision ways to decolonize health care places and spaces from an Indigenous perspective.

From Holistic Care to Activist Nursing: Centering Affirming Approaches to Care

Grand Ballroom I

This presentation will focus on the clinical importance of nurses in gender-affirming care. Special attention will be paid to caring for the whole person, empowering others, fostering family connection, remaining transparent and allowing for multiple voices at the table. Building off of this clinical model, we will reflect on how effective nursing care can empower and affirm all LGBTQ+ people. After discussing good clinical care, we will focus on research, advocacy, and education. While this model is based on gender-affirming care, we argue that this offers a model for all of healthcare, one that is patient-centered and based on the human story.

The Political Determinants of Health & How We Can Change Them

Florida Ballroom

Now, more than ever, political decisions (on both sides of the aisle) are affecting our social conditions and have become the root cause of our nation's declining health. Reduced life expectancy, worsening health outcomes, health inequity and declining healthcare options are the direct result of social drivers that include poor environmental conditions, inadequate transportation, unsafe neighborhoods, lack of healthy food options and more. Drawing upon his new book, The Political Determinants of Health, and firsthand experience shaping major federal policies including the Affordable Care Act, Daniel Dawes walks audiences through the history of efforts to address these issues and the seemingly inseparable interconnection of politics and health. Daniel looks at health through the political lens so we can begin to partner, build capacity and create change. He also presents a novel non-partisan, multidisciplinary framework for addressing the systemic barriers that prevent the U.S. from becoming what it could be: the healthiest nation in the world.
